Lysa Webb, MA LPC

Portland, Oregon 97221

Philosophy and Approach: Play is the language of children. As Plato stated, “You can discover more about a person in an hour of play than in a year of conversation.” My approach to the counseling process has a strong reliance on Gestalt (Play) Therapy. However, my experience working with individuals requires different approaches to meet the person where he/she is at in his/her life, which includes but is not limited to Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy, Solution-Focused Therapy, and Family Systems Therapy.

Formal Education and Training: I hold a Master’s Degree in Counseling Psychology from Lewis and Clark College. Major course work included human growth and development with an emphasis on children and adolescent treatment. I have extensive training and experience working in crisis intervention with children, teens and adults. I receive on-going training on individual and play therapy techniques with children, teens and adults as well as other trainings relevant to my practice.

Fees: My fee is $100 per 50 minute therapeutic hour for individual sessions. My fee is $150 per 90 minute session for couples or family therapy. Fees are collected at the start of every session, either with cash, check or credit card. Sorry, I am not set up to take insurance payments at this time. I do have limited slots for sliding scale clients, please talk to me about sliding scale options.

I am a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC) with the Oregon Boards of Licensed Professional Counselors and Therapists and I abide by its Code of Ethics.
